COOPER EXPENDITURES FLAYED

OPPONENT HOPES TO BUY ELECTION SAYS DAVEY HERE FRIDAY

Texas Congressman Pleads For Smith; 400 Hear Talk

Nearly 400 people heard addresses by Congressman Martin L. Davey, Kent, O., Democratic candidate for governor and Congressman Fritz Lanham, Fort Worth, Texas, of the Democratic national speaker's bureau, in the first major Democratic rally of the local campaign at City Hall Theater Friday night.

The Democratic gubernatorial nominee reiterated his charge that Myers Y. Cooper, his Republican opponent, had "bought" his nomination and is proceeding to open his purse to be elected in the same way. According to Davey, Cooper money is flowing freely.

"At the last primary, Cooper spent a quarter of a million dollars to obtain the nomination. He admitted spending $60,000 in his official report to the secretary of state. He also admitted spending $70,000 two years ago although the evidence indicates he spent considerably more than that. Why did he have to buy it again?"

"If it has come to a point where we are willing to sell these public offices to the highest bidder we will surrender everything that is worth while."

Davey also denounced Cooper for an alleged payment of $50,000 for the "support of a crooked political gang at Cincinnati at the recent primary."

Speaking about the Xenia O. S. and S. O. Home, Davey declared that the state legislature appointed a committee of so-called experts to find out what they could eliminate in order to save money.

"If it is my privilege to serve the state of Ohio as governor, there will be no backward step in this matter of the O. S. and S. O. Home. I propose to see that all old soldiers and sailors and particularly their children shall have what a grateful government can do for them. It has been my pleasure as a member of congress to vote for all legislation beneficial to the soldier."

In the opening remarks of his speech, Davey recalled an alleged declaration made by Senator S. D. Fess in Springfield recently in which he was quoted as saying: "For the first time we have all the morals on our side, and all the loose morals on the other side."

In answering, Congressman Davey asked how the "sanctimonious Senator Fess had forgotten Vire, the most corrupt politician in Pennsylvania, who bought his way into the senate and he (Fess) was one who voted for him."

"He must also have forgotten Albert Hall, the man who betrayed his country like a thief in the night. He probably also has forgotten Smith of Illinois, who tried to buy his way into the senate; Sinclair, Doheny, Denby, Forbes and Will Hays."

Congressman Davey defended politics as the science of government. "People like honesty in politics because honest administration means an audience which interrupted him frequently with applause, Congressman Lanham discussed national issues of the campaign."

Lanham asserted that the Democratic party does not seek support of the national ticket on any basis of misunderstanding. He described himself as a Methodist, a Bible teacher and said he methodically filled the pulpits of his home church and in Washington, D. C.

Contrasting the two presidential candidates, the speaker asserted both were of humble birth but that there the similarity ends. "Smith devoted his time to governmental training while Hoover spent his life in engineering and industrial pursuits."

Before an outstanding quality of Smith is his candor in his relations with the people. His attitude on public questions leaves the public in no doubt. On the other hand you may

THREE HIGH SCHOOL PUPILS ARE KILLED

TOLEDO, O., Oct. 20.—An unguarded culvert here resulted in an automobile accident last night which cost the lives of three Toledo school students.

The accident occurred when the car, driven by Grady Hawkins, 16, struck a low concrete abutment at the side of the culvert and plunged into a shallow creek.

Those killed were: Thelma Henry, 13, of Nathan High School; Lois Hinkleman, 15, freshman at Libbey High School.

Earl Bryant, Jr., 15, also of Libbey.

The machine was a roadster and the four students crowded it to capacity.

Young Hawkins who escaped with only minor bruises, told police he was driving only fifteen miles an hour as he approached the culvert.

The victims were pinned beneath the machine. Hawkins was freed by a man whom he attracted with his cries.

The man stopped a passing motorist who pulled away the car to extricate the others. All were dead.

NOSE PAINT?

PAINESVILLE, O., Oct. 20.—Painted horses and a threatening note figure in a strange tale related to Marshall James Moloney of Willoughby by John Yosko, who is employed by his brother-in-law, Steve Koren, River Road.

Yosko said that seven of Koren's saddle horses were daubed and striped in nearly all colors of the rainbow sometime during the night. On the door of the barn was found a note which read:

"You are next."

Koren and Yosko say they know of no motive for the warning.

COLUMBUS IS HAPPY OVER PROSPECTS FOR OHIO GRID VICTORY

Ticket Scalpers Are Active; City Is Full Of Fans.

COLUMBUS, O., Oct. 20.—Ohio State University prepared to take a whack at Michigan, her reliable old enemy today and it was apparent long before the game started that football stadiums could be built somewhat larger.

Columbus was host to a mob a lot better than the 75,000 who may see the game and the fans who failed to capture any of the coveted ducats had to amuse themselves watching the side-show, which was a sight to behold.

Hotels were overcrowded. College-looking boys and girls stood around the counters and worried clerks sick begging for some place to wash their teeth. The sidewalks were jammed.

There were plenty of reason for all this. For six consecutive seasons the Michigan Wolverines have walked on the Buckeyes' toes and whenever the game was scheduled for Columbus, Michigan fans took the town and revamped it on the Saturday night of the game.

There was a glint in the eyes today, however, of Ohio followers engendered by reports that Michigan is weak this year, having already lost her first two games of the season.

The day broke chilly and clear. There seemed to be a nip of frost in the air which bespoke a perfect football day.

Ticket scalpers, their conceit fed by realization of the prizes they possessed, were nonchalant and some of them were holding out for $20 for $3 seats. Last night many were getting $10 without pulling a trigger.

An army of nearly 2,500 men was mobilized to handle the crowd at the game. This number included about 1,100 Boy Scouts who were to act as ushers.

A representation of the country's widely-read sport writers sat in the press box and called off play by play to telegraph operators. Thirty special wires and four radio stations carried the word out into the highways and byways. The stations were: WGN, Chicago; WTAM, Cleveland; WWJ, Detroit and WEAO, Columbus.

The Buckeyes were favorites to win but watching the crowd, one would begin to suspect that the game itself was incidental to the grand old sport of seeking tickets, the trip each year and making money out of it.

For years the crowd has followed the Wolverines and the Buckeyes and even with the Michigan possibilities about gone, they poured forth for the side-show notwithstanding.

University officials said the tickets were sold out. Two hundred tickets were returned the other tickets but this only served up a little irony as they went immediately to fill back-orders.

The cry, however, was "bigger and better stadiums," wider streets and fewer policemen.

SIX WOMEN AND SIX MEN NAMED ON CICCO JURY

Will Hear Testimony In Shooting At Lorain Monday

ELYRIA, O., Oct. 20.—Testimony by witnesses in common pleas court here on whether Louis Cicco, former Lorain dry rider, shot Miss Betty Heywood, 22, "with intent to wound" on the night of September 26, will start Monday.

Miss Heywood was shot at Lorain where she was riding to stop at the command of the Lorain liquor squad, Cicco was a member of the squad.

No session of court was held today.

The morning and a portion of the afternoon yesterday was spent in qualifying a jury to try Cicco.

After six men and six women had been sworn in as the jury, the twelve were taken to the scene of the shooting under the direction of Common Pleas Assignment Commissioner Judson C. Jackson.

The juryman saw the spot where Cicco and his companions, Frank Cicco and Walter Knipper, stationed themselves to watch for liquor-runners.

WHITE RENEWS HIS ATTACKS ON SMITH

INDEPENDENCE, Kas., Oct. 20.—William Allen White, Emporia, Kan., editor, has renewed his attacks on Gov. Alfred E. Smith, charging that he is "menacing the ideals of American life."

"For nine years," White said in an address here, "Tammany Hall has been the cancer spot, but under the Boss Murphy rule Tammany Hall began spreading its virus over the state of New York."

Now dominating New York, and amalgamating with the Democratic bosses of the cities in the political states, this year Tammany threatens to infect the nation.

"Al Smith, the young Tammanyite, doing chores for the pug-nugles of his district has become a thoroughly Tammanized man."

Smith, the Democratic candidate, as he may to elude the Tammany tiger out of his path, finds that the old cat comes back."

FAMED OPERA STAR, DISAPPOINTED, PENNILESS, KILLS SELF

CHICAGO, Oct. 20.—Mrs. Isabelle Grant, daughter of Kentucky pioneers, once the idol of opera lovers in Vienna, Dresden and Cologne, pawned her fur coat to obtain money for poison with which she killed herself here.

Mrs. Grant, whose stage names were Belle Applegate and Phadrig Agoin, died in a psychiatric hospital a few hours after she swallowed the poison in an Evanston Hotel room, where she had lived only two days.

In a letter, Mrs. Grant said "this is the end of an opera star, my blood be upon America for her treatment of the daughter of Kentucky pioneers."

As Belle Applegate and Phadrig Agoin, Mrs. Grant gained great fame in Europe during the first years of the twentieth century and had reached the height of that fame in 1909, when she was the mezzo soprano at the Stadt Theater in Cologne.

It was not until after the World War, in which her husband was killed, that the opera star's fame began to dim. As her voice and beauty faded, she lost her health and means of support. She was almost destitute when she came here from her old Louisville, Ky., home three months ago. She was making arrangements for an audition with opera managers here when she became ill and was forced to go to a charity ward in a hospital.

Instead of remaining in the hospital, she secured her baggage, pawned everything of value she had, including her fur coat, and used the money to rent the hotel room and buy poison.

Mrs. Grant returned from Europe to her former Louisville home last Christmas and was favorably received in a "tribute concert" there. It was believed the reference to the "American people" was the expression of a bitter regret that here as she felt it should have been.

In some of her letters, Mrs. Grant wrote bitter words against her relatives. "In one she mentioned 'my very cruel brother, Dr. Joseph Applegate, of Detroit.'"

"He shot at me and wouldn't let me have my trunk," she wrote. "It contained my love letters from my dead husband, and my stage costumes and my opera scores."

New Kind of Sky-Writing

The picture was taken in mid-air by Robert Hartmann of International Newsreel, the only photographer who made the voyage.

ECKENER WILL VISIT AKRON BY PLANE; FLIES WEST WEDNESDAY

WASHINGTON, Oct. 20.—Dr. Hugo Eckener will depart today for a trip over part of the route he will cover next week when he visits the eastern half of the United States in his dirigible Graf Zeppelin.

After a crowded day of sight-seeing yesterday, Eckener had only one major engagement today—luncheon at the National Press Club. He will leave for Akron, O., this afternoon with First Officer Lehman of the Zeppelin to visit the Goodyear Zeppelin plant. From Akron, he goes to Chicago. If weather and repairs permit, the Graf Zeppelin will start west from Lakehurst next Wednesday, stopping overnight at Scott Field, Belleville, Ill. Thursday night the big ship is due back at Lakehurst and next Saturday, Eckener and his men expect to sail for Germany to complete the first round trip airline crossing of the Atlantic for commercial purposes.

Prussian Minister of Interior Grezinski, who was a passenger on the flight from New York for home. His absence from Washington during the official welcoming ceremonies recalled that during the inconveniences of the landing at Lakehurst, Grezinski suggested that the passengers boycott all airlines while in the United States. It was not suggested here that his absence was otherwise than unavoidable or that he was making a personal boycott effective.

MAU PROBES VOTING FRAUDS IN COUNTY

CINCINNATI, O., Oct. 20.—Federal District Attorney Haveth E. Mau today was investigating alleged election frauds in Pike County, involving the use of absentee voters' ballots.

The charges, according to Mau, involved members of both major parties, although the district attorney was not prepared to say to what extent.

The fraud, Mau said, involves the use of solicitors and notary publics who are accused of seeking out former residents, now residing in other counties, and persuading them to send in an absentee ballot.

Mau said his preliminary investigation had revealed that persons living as far away as New Mexico had been solicited. He also charged that from $5 to $10 was paid for each vote.

In 1925 federal authorities conducted a similar inquiry in Pike County but no indictments were returned.

PLANE PASSENGER DIES DURING TRIP

CLEVELAND, O., Oct. 20.—Funeral services were to be arranged today for Harry Robertson, 29, of Elyria, a lieutenant in the 112th observation squadron, O. N. G., who died in a plane enroute from Akron to Cleveland yesterday.

Robertson was a passenger in a plane piloted by Lieut. G. M. Cummings, flight instructor in the 112th observation squadron.

Halfway from Akron, Lieut. Cummings said, he noticed Robertson's body grow limp. He could find no place to land so he sped into the Cleveland airport.

Robertson was rushed to Berea Community Hospital, where he was pronounced dead.

ROBINSON HEARS SMITH OVER RADIO

ABOARD ROBINSON TRAIN, ENROUTE TO HASTINGS, Neb., Oct. 20.—Senator Robinson, Republican Democratic nominee for vice president, came to Nebraska today to remain through Monday.

He has consented to add an extra speech to his original Nebraska schedule and will talk at Grand Island immediately upon arrival of his train there at 3:40 p. m. today.

The other Nebraska addresses will be at Hastings, tonight, and at Lincoln on Monday.

Last night Senator Robinson heard Governor Alfred E. Smith make a campaign speech. It was the first time during the campaign he has heard his running mate.

A radio connection was fixed up at the senator's hotel in Casper, Wyo., and he listened to Smith address before delivering his own.

CURTIS INVADING SMITH TERRITORY

ABOARD CURTIS CAR, ENROUTE TO NEW HAVEN, Conn., Oct. 20.—Senator Charles Curtis, Republican Democratic nominee for vice-president, carried his campaign into Governor Alfred E. Smith's own backyard today.

Starting from Trenton, N. J., where he spoke last night, Curtis will continue north to New Haven and Hartford, Conn. He will speak tonight at Hartford.

REPUBLICAN AIDES STRIKE QUICKLY AT FALSE PROPAGANDA

Postmaster, Wife, Suspended For Mail Conspiracy

WASHINGTON, Oct. 20.—Herbert Hoover's campaign aides, including Postmaster General New, are striving to halt two new "whispering" stories giving additional evidence that this presidential campaign is developing much bitterness in its closing days.

In the first place, George Akerson, Hoover's secretary, had denounced as "unusually false" a new "whisper" that Hoover visited and danced with Mary Booze, Negro national committeewoman from Mississippi at Mound Bayou, Miss., while on flood relief work last spring.

Secondly, Postmaster General New had suspended, pending further investigation, the postmaster and assistant postmaster at Lansing, Pa., because allegedly they had assisted in sending out, without proper postal marks, circulars attacking Hoover and local candidates in that Pennsylvania district.

The denial of the booze story was contained in a telegram prepared with Hoover's advice, sent to Gov. Theodore G. Bilbo of Mississippi, who Akerson said, on the basis of southern press reports, had repeated the story in a recent speech in Memphis.

"There is not the slightest foundation for it," Akerson wired Bilbo. "It is the most indecent and unworthy statement in the whole of a bitter campaign."

"No more truthful and ignoble assertion was ever uttered by a public man in the United States than that attributed to you."

Akerson, who said he was with Hoover "every hour of the four months" in the flood zone, explained Hoover was at Mound Bayou only once. The train stopped there for three minutes and Hoover never left the platform, he said, but received there a memorial thanking him for his service to their race.

In his telegram, Akerson inserted a resolution adopted by the Mississippi legislature commending Hoover for his relief work.

The move to halt this "whispering" story against the Republican candidate was sudden and dramatic like the signed statement issued a few weeks ago by the Democratic candidate, Governor Alfred E. Smith, "nailing as a lie" a story circulated against him that he was intoxicated at the Syracuse state fair. Following that incident, Hoover made it known there always were "whispering" stories circulated about him.

Within the last two days, Chairman Work issued a denial of an often repeated story that Hoover had sought British citizenship, and the Republican committee replied again to the repeated charge that the Republican candidate kept down the price of wheat during the war.

Vigorous steps to stop the latest "whispering" story circulated in the south, a section to which Republican presidential candidates in the past have paid little attention—gave evidence of the hope of Republicans this year to break into that Democratic stronghold.

Meantime New has suspended Robert M. Stickler, the Lansing postmaster, and Mrs. Bessie Burns Stickler, assistant postmaster, pending investigation of the alleged conspiracy. They are charged, the postmaster general explained, with conspiring with others to mail through the Lansing post office, without postmarks and without identification on mail tags, a large number of anonymous circulars attacking Hoover as well as candidates for local offices.

The circulars were mailable, New said, but a deliberate conspiracy was under way to prevent the post office and the public from learning the mailing point. They were signed "non-partisan committee." The circulars are reported to have attacked as traitors in the Revolutionary War the names of Quakers to which Hoover belongs.

Hoover prepared for another busy day at his headquarters today, incident to his departure Sunday for New York, where he will speak in Madison Square Garden Monday night. Under a revised schedule, the candidate and his wife will leave here Sunday afternoon for New York.

COUSIN OF ITALY'S KING ASKS DIVORCE

CHICAGO, Oct. 20.—Countess Josephine De Bosdari, wife of Count Anthony De Bosdari, second cousin of the king of Italy, has filed suit for divorce, charging infidelity. A cross bill denying the charges has been filed by the count. Countess De Bosdari formerly was Josephine Fosh of Chicago.

The count and countess were married last March.

SMITH RETURNING EAST FOR INTENSIVE CLOSING CAMPAIGN

CHICAGO, Oct. 20.—Gov. Alfred E. Smith turned back toward his native east today to concentrate his final efforts in the big electoral states with plenty of campaign material up his sleeve for the final drive.

Democratic presidential nominee will wind up his national campaign just as he has wound up every state campaign, in a burst of activity.

Seven speeches are expected to be made in the last two weeks before election probably in Baltimore, Boston, New York, Pittsburgh, Philadelphia, Providence and Newark. It has long been a political adage in New York that Smith won his gubernatorial battles in the last two weeks before election. His friends say he will try the same tactics in this campaign and they foresee the development of some unexpected material which he believes will have a bearing on the national situation.

The governor is leaving here at 10 a. m., Central time for Indianapolis where he will stop for an hour or two for a parade and a visit to the bedside of his old friend Thomas Taggart, the Indiana Democratic leader.

From there he will set his course for Albany and two or three days of rest before he hops into the final conflict.

Smith is satisfied with the west, and the reception he received here, and especially with the speech he delivered in the downtown Chicago Armory last night on the theme: "The record of the present administration is a guarantee of the next," the text being taken from the Republican platform. Smith played upon this text to emphasize what the farmers, the war veterans, those interested in prohibition, and the conservationists of water power resources might expect.

The nominee directed his fire particularly at Senator Borah of Idaho and Chairman Work of the Republican national committee. He rebuffed Borah by resurrecting a speech the senator made in 1919 in which Smith said amounted to an indictment of the ability, trustworthiness and efficiency of Herbert Hoover, the Republican nominee. The governor said the record was jumbled about Borah's challenge of trust, but he asked the Sunday evening, however, there will be a political radio hook-up. The regular 21-station chain of the Columbia Broadcasting system will broadcast a dramatization of the career of Governor Alfred E. Smith, beginning at 7:30 p. m. Eastern Time.

The dramatic sketch is entitled "Up From the City Streets," and was adapted for radio by Fulton Oursler, playwright from the Norman Hapgood and Henry Moskowitz biography of Smith.

An all-star cast of noted players will take part in the performance including Richard Bennett, Peggy Wood, Rosamund Pinchof, star of "The Miracle," and others.

senator now to make it clear whether the reference was not to Hoover.

Work was mentioned in connection with the recent decision of Attorney General Sargent nullifying the Salt Creek Royalty Oil lease of Harry P. Sinclair, the Teapot Dome oil magnate. Smith said Work had renewed the option of the lease and that "the only defense he thus far has offered is this: 'I have no comment to make. Those things are past. People are tired of hearing of these oil leases.'"

The farmers have been fed on empty promises, Smith said. The war veterans were deprived of just care and in the case of those at the Tupperlake Sanitarium, New York, were prevented from registering to vote in this election, he added. Those for or against prohibition cannot be discouraged by the present system, he argued.

OPPONENT HOPES TO BUY ELECTION SAYS DAVEY HERE FRIDAY

Texas Congressman Pleads For Smith; 400 Hear Talks

Nearly 400 people heard addresses by Congressman Martin L. Davey, Kent, O., Democratic candidate for governor and Congressman Fritz Lanham, Fort Worth, Texas, of the Democratic national speaker's bureau, in the first major Democratic rally of the local campaign at City Hall Theater Friday night.

The Democratic gubernatorial nominee reiterated his charge that Myers Y. Cooper, his Republican opponent, had "bought" his nomination and is proceeding to open his purse to be elected in the same way. According to Davey, Cooper money is flowing freely.

"At the last primary, Cooper spent a quarter of a million dollars to obtain the nomination. He admitted spending $60,000 in his official report to the secretary of state. He also admitted spending $70,000 two years ago although the evidence indicates he spent considerably more than that. Why did he have to buy it again?"

"If it has come to a point where we are willing to sell these public offices to the highest bidder, we will surrender everything that is worth while."

Davey also denounced Cooper for an alleged payment of $50,000 for the "support of a crooked political party at Cincinnati at the recent primary."

Speaking about the Xenia O. S. and S. O. Home, Davey declared that the state legislature appointed a committee of so-called experts to find out what they could eliminate in order to save money.

I propose to see that all old soldiers and sailors and particularly their children shall have what a grateful government can do for them. It has been my pleasure as a member of congress to vote for all legislation beneficial to the soldier."

In the opening remarks of his speech, Davey recalled an alleged declaration made by Senator S. D. Fess in Springfield recently in which he was quoted as saying: "For the first time we have all the morals on our side, and all the loose morals on the other side."

In answering, Congressman Davey asked how the "sanctimonious Senator Fess had forgotten Varo, the most corrupt politician in Pennsylvania, who bought his way into the senate and he (Fess) was one who voted for him."

"He must also have forgotten Albert Fall, the man who betrayed his country like a thief in the night. He probably also has forgotten Smith of Illinois, who tried to buy his way into the senate; Sinclair, Doheny, Denby, Forbes and Will Hays."

Congressman Davey defended politics as the science of government. "People like honesty in politics because honesty in politics means an honest administration."

More an audience which interrupted him frequently with applause, Congressman Lanham discussed national issues of the campaign.

WHITE RENEWS HIS ATTACKS ON SMITH

INDEPENDENCE, Kas., Oct. 20.—William Allen White, Emporia, Kan., editor, has renewed his attacks on Gov. Alfred E. Smith, charging this time that Tammany Hall, through Smith, is "menacing the ideals of American life."

"For nine years," White said in an address here, "Tammany Hall was a localized disease. New York City was the cancer spot, but under the Boss Murphy rule Tammany Hall began spreading its virus over the state of New York. Now dominating New York, and amalgamating with the Democratic bosses of the cities in the industrial states, this year Tammany threatens to infect the nation."

"Al Smith, the young Tammanite, doing chores for the pug-uglies of his district has become thoroughly Tammanized and Gov. Smith, the Democratic candidate, try as he may to elude the Tammany tiger out of his path, finds that the old cat comes back."

COLUMBUS IS HAPPY OVER PROSPECTS FOR OHIO GRID VICTORY

Ticket Scalpers Are Active; City Is Full Of Fans.

COLUMBUS, O., Oct. 20.—Ohio State University prepared to take a whack at Michigan, her reliable old enemy today and it was apparent long before the game started that football stadiums could be built somewhat larger.

Columbus was host to a mob a lot hotter than the 75,000 who may see the game and the fans who failed to capture any of the coveted ducats had to amuse themselves watching the side-show, which was a sight to behold.

Hotels were overcrowded. College-looking boys and girls stood around the counters and worried clerks sick begging for some place to wash their teeth. The sidewalks were jammed. There were new numbers among the town's list of raccoon coats moving about with bodies inside of them.

There was plenty of reason for all this. For six consecutive seasons the Michigan Wolverines have waited on the Buckeye toes and whenever the games were scheduled for Columbus, Michigan fans took the town and revamped it on the Saturday night of the game. There was a glint in the eyes today, however, of Ohio followers engendered by reports that Michigan is weak this year, having already lost her first two games of the season.

The day broke chilly and clear. There seemed to be a nip of frost in the air which bespoke a perfect football day.

Ticket scalpers, their conceit fed by realization of the prizes they possessed, were nonchalant and some of them were holding out for $20 for $3 seats. Last night many were getting $10 without pulling a trigger.

An army of nearly 2,500 men was mobilized to handle the crowd at the game. This number included about 1,100 Boy Scouts who were to act as ushers.

A representation of the country's widely-read sport writers sat in the press box and called off play by play to telegraph operators. Thirty special wires and "our radio stations carried the word out into the highways and byways. The stations are: WGN, Chicago; WTAM, Cleveland; WWJ, Detroit and WEAQ, Columbus.

The Buckeyes were favorites to win but watching the crowd, one would begin to suspect that the game itself was incidental to the grand old sport of seeking tickets, mulling with the mob and making the trip each year whether it is possible to get near the stadium or not. For years the crowd has followed the Wolverines and the Michigan potentialities about gone, they poured forth for the side-show notwithstanding.

University officials said the tickets were sold out Two hundred tickets were returned the other day by Michigan's athletic department but this only served up a little irony as they went immediately to fill back-orders.

The cry, however, was "bigger and better stadiums," wider streets and fewer policemen.

New Kind of Sky-Writing

Lady Drummond Hay, the only woman passenger aboard the giant Graf Zeppelin from Friedrichshafen to Lakehurst, wrote the story of her flight en route for a large American newspaper syndicate. The picture was taken in mid-air by Robert Hartmann of International Newsreel, the only photographer who made the voyage.

ECKENER WILL VISIT AKRON BY PLANE; FLIES WEST WEDNESDAY

WASHINGTON, Oct. 20.—Dr. Hugo Eckener will depart today for a trip over part of the route he will cover next week when he visits the eastern half of the United States in his dirigible Graf Zeppelin.

After a crowded day of sight-seeing yesterday, Eckener had only one major engagement today—luncheon at the National Press Club. He will leave for Akron, O., this afternoon with First Officer Lehman of the Zeppelin to visit the Goodyear Zeppelin plant. From Akron, he goes to Chicago.

MAU PROBES VOTING FRAUDS IN COUNTY

CINCINNATI, O., Oct. 20.—Federal District Attorney Haveth E. Mau today was investigating alleged election frauds in Pike County, involving the use of absentee voters' ballots.

The charges, according to Mau, link members of both major parties, although the district attorney was not prepared to say to what extent.

The fraud, Mau said, involves the use of solicitors and notary publics who are accused of seeking out former residents, now residing in other counties, and persuading them to send in an absentee ballot.

Mau said his preliminary investigation had revealed that persons living as far away as New Mexico had been solicited. He also charged that from $5 to $10 was paid for each vote.

In 1925 federal authorities conducted a similar inquiry in Pike County but no indictments were returned.

PLANE PASSENGER DIES DURING TRIP

CLEVELAND, O., Oct. 20.—Funeral services were to be arranged today for Harry Robertson, 29, of Elyria, a lieutenant in the 112th observation squadron, O. N. G., who died in a plane enroute from Akron to Cleveland late yesterday.

Robertson was a passenger in a plane piloted by Lieut. G. M. Cummings, flight instructor in the 112th observation squadron.

Halfway from Akron, Lieut. Cummings said, he noticed Robertson's body grow limp. He could find no place to land so he sped on into the Cleveland airport. Robertson was rushed to Eerie Community Hospital, where he was pronounced dead.

Smith make a campaign speech. It was the first time during the campaign he has heard his running mate. COUSIN OF ITALY'S KING ASKS DIVORCE

CHICAGO, Oct. 20.—Countess Josephine De Bosdari, wife of Count Anthony De Bosdari, second cousin of the King of Italy, has filed suit for divorce, charging infidelity. A cross bill denying the charges has been filed by the count. Countess De Bosdari formerly was Josephine Fish of Chicago.

The count and countess were married last March.

REPUBLICAN AIDES STRIKE QUICKLY AT FALSE PROPAGANDA

Postmaster, Wife, Suspended For Mail Conspiracy

WASHINGTON, Oct. 20.—Herbert Hoover's campaign aides, including Postmaster General New, are striving to halt two new "whispering" stories giving additional evidence that this presidential campaign is developing much bitterness in its closing days.

In the first place, George Akerson, Hoover's secretary, had denounced as "unqualifiedly false" a new "whisper" that Hoover visited and danced with Mary Booze, Negro national committeewoman from Mississippi at Mound Bayou, Miss., while on flood relief work last spring.

Secondly, Postmaster General New had suspended, pending further investigation, the postmaster and assistant postmaster at Lansford, Pa., because allegedly they had assisted in sending out, without proper postal marks, circulars attacking Hoover and local candidates in that Pennsylvania district.

The denial of the booze story was contained in a telegram, prepared with Hoover's advice, sent to Gov. Theodore G. Bilbo of Mississippi, who Akerson said, on the basis of southern press reports, had repeated the story in a recent speech in Memphis.

"There is not the slightest foundation for it," Akerson wired Bilbo. "It is the most indecent and unworthy statement in the whole of a bitter campaign."

"No more untruthful and ignoble assertion was ever uttered by a public man in the United States than that attributed to you."

Akerson, who said he was with Hoover "every hour of the four months" in the flood zone, explained Hoover was at Mound Bayou only once. The train stopped there for three minutes and Hoover never left the platform, he said, but received there from a group of Negroes a memorial thanking him for his service to their race.

In his telegram, Akerson inserted a resolution adopted by the Mississippi legislature commending Hoover for his relief work.

The move to halt this "whispering" story against the Republican candidate was sudden and dramatic like the signed statement issued a few weeks ago by the Democratic candidate, Governor Alfred E. Smith, "nailing as a lie" a story circulated against him that he was intoxicated at the Syracuse state fair. Following that incident, Hoover made it known there always were "whispering" stories circulated about him.

Within the last two days, Chairman Work issued a denial of another often repeated story that Hoover had sought British citizenship, and the Republican committee replied again to the charge that the Republican candidate kept down the price of wheat during the war.

Vigorous steps to stop the latest "whispering" story circulated in the south, a section to which Republican presidential candidates in the past have paid little attention—gave evidence of the hope of Republicans this year to break into that Democratic stronghold.

Meantime New has suspended Robert M. Stickler, the Lansford postmaster, and Mrs. Bessie Burns Stickler, assistant postmaster, pending investigation of the alleged conspiracy. They are charged, the postmaster general explained, with continuing with others to mail through the Lansford post office, without postmarks and without identification on mail tags, a large number of anonymous circulars attacking Hoover as well as candidates for local offices.

The circulars were mailable, New said, but a deliberate conspiracy was under way to prevent the post office and the public from learning the mailing point. They were signed "non-partisan committee." The circulars are reported to have attacked as traitors in the Revolutionary War the branch of Quakers to which Hoover belongs.

Hoover prepared for another busy day at his headquarters today, incident to his departure Sunday for New York, where he will speak in Madison Square Garden Monday night. Under a revised schedule, the candidate and his wife will leave here Sunday afternoon for New York.

SHOES, SHOES, SHOES!!!

Thousands of pairs of shoes--from heavy brogans with brass-tipped toes and metal-bound heels to dainty slippers balanced on spike heels.

Shoes in patent leather, "gun metal", calfskin, kid, kangaroo, cordovan, lizard, reptile, alligator, gold cloth, silver cloth, elk skin, canvas and satin.

Soles in delicate turns, heavy welts or cleverly finished "McKays". Heels of broad leather or rubber, military heels, spool heels, French heels, spike heels.

Shoes for the policeman, the railroader, the farmer, the factory worker, the business man, the football player, for basketball, golf or tennis. Shoes for milady of the afternoon tea, the business girl, the flapper, the rough and ready school boy, the helpless infant.

Hundreds upon hundreds of pairs of shoes for men, women, boys, girls, infants, in all varieties of shapes, sizes, leathers, colors, finishes and styles, designed for all types of social, business or sports wear.

That's a composite picture of the stocks of Xenia shoe merchants now entering the autumn season with merchandise ready to meet the necessity, the demand, the taste, or the whim of a discriminating, style-conscious, comfort-seeking public.

There comes a time when stone-bruises, the thrill of cool dust oozing between the toes along shady summer lanes, and the satisfaction of being first in the swimming hole, cease to be virtues.

Just about the time the boy becomes first girl-conscious he likewise becomes conscious of stone-bruised heels and stubbed toes.

From then on, Xenia shoe merchants are equipped to cater to their tastes in style or comfort, according to personal demands. To be able to do this requires most careful and discriminating buying.

Part of this difficulty is of recent vintage. The demand of women for different types of shoes with different costumes, brought into popular favor the new and attractive leathers that are so perishable because of fashion's whims that may change almost over night to something new.

This, coupled with the necessity for a wide range of lasts and the increased education of the public in proper sizes, which the merchants themselves have brought about, have made it necessary for the retailer to carry huge stocks in all styles and sizes and to price this merchandise so that the consumer can afford two or more pairs.

Retailers know that Xenia buyers demand quality merchandise and they have consistently operated with that in view.

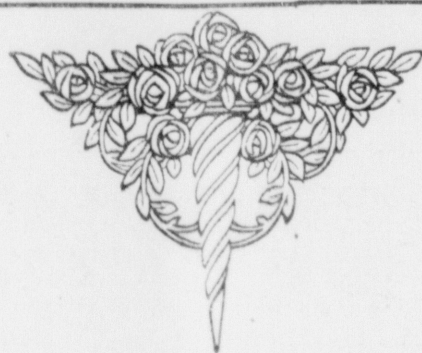

Buying your shoes in Xenia is therefore pleasant as well as virtuous. Buying here enables Xenia stores to expand, and expansion brings prosperity.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

THE JUST MAN—The way of the just is upright; thou, most upright, dost weigh the path of the just.—Isa. 26:7.

ATLANTIC AIR LINERS

It is a far cry from the days when Santos-Dumont experimented with his puny balloons and told sympathetic but skeptical listeners that people would some day fly across the oceans with no more thought of the novelty of the experience than they gave to an afternoon drive in a phaeton.

The Graf Zeppelin has crossed the Atlantic and there is every reason to feel that Santos-Dumont's prophecy is within easy hailing distance of fulfillment and the long-cherished dream of trans-Atlantic passenger travel by air is at last translating itself into solid reality.

It is likewise interesting at this moment to recall the record of our own queen of the air, the Los Angeles. She crossed the Atlantic from Germany in October, 1924, or just four years prior to the flight of the Graf Zeppelin. Since then she has flown nearly 65,000 miles, including the flight from Germany and the one to Texas, from which she has just returned. Barring one or two rather distressing experiences, she has ridden the air with all the confidence and strength of an eagle and today is as shipshape as when she left the factory at Friedrichshafen.

Nothing that man has accomplished in his long history is more thrilling than his conquest of the air during the first three decades of the 20th century. But as man's accomplishments grow utilitarian they all gradually lose their thrill and finally suffer the fate that goes hand in hand with familiarity. In the future the arrival of an airship load of passengers from Germany, may, perhaps, mean nothing in our lives. But just at present it means very much indeed—so much that the Graf Zeppelin received a welcome that may make other ocean fliers suffer a few pangs of pardonable jealousy.

NEWSPAPERS SWINGING OVER

One very sure indication of the number of Democratic and independent voters who are swinging their support to Hoover and Curtis this year is to be found in the support of the Republican candidates by 86 newspapers having editorial policies either pronouncedly Democratic or independent.

There would be scant significance in a pro-Hoover declaration by an isolated Democratic newspaper here and there. But when 36 editors in Kentucky alone decide to give their full editorial support to the Republican nominee, despite the fact that their sympathies are usually with the Democratic party or are reserved for the candidate whom they think best fitted for the office, their action points to a trend of sentiment.

Such a consistently Democratic state as Alabama has 16 newspapers which have refused to support the candidate of the party whose doctrine they espouse, and are out and out for Hoover and Curtis. In Oklahoma the Democratic national ticket has lost the support of eight such papers, and so it goes, until the total list includes newspapers located in 15 states.

The Way of the World

By GROVE PATTERSON

HUMAN INTEREST

Somebody asks: what is a human interest story? Well, here is a human interest story. The parents of Lon Chaney, one of the most amazing motion picture actors in the world, were deaf and dumb. When Chaney was but a boy his mother became an invalid, her expressive hands forever motionless with rheumatism. The boy Chaney, only in the fourth grade, cared patiently, constantly, for his mother. She lay quietly day by day, her voice mute, her hands silent. Lon Chaney HAD to make his mother understand and he HAD to understand her. He learned the art of pantomime. He acquired the most extraordinary resourcefulness of expression. He became one of the world's greatest actors. It is an example of the reward of devotion—a reward he did not seek but which was inevitable.

SUBLIME

In the devotion of human beings to each other, to principle, to home, to flat—in all expressions of sincere loyalty there is something sublime. Man is not at his greatest in science or literature or art. He is not at his greatest in discovery and exploration. He is at his greatest in those few human relationships in which there is sublime self-forgetfulness.

FAITH

Near the top of a box which stands on a table is a small opening. Men sit in front of this little window and look and listen. Suddenly the players on a distant stage appear on a screen over the opening and the sound of their voices is heard plainly in the room. They are enacting a drama and this little audience is hearing it and seeing it by means of radio television. Soon the instruments, looking like radio sets today, will be on the market.

Where shall the doubter hide? What corner can the scoffer find that is dark enough? Who laughs at miracles and shows his ignorance? Who has small faith and displays his littleness? Life is too great to think little.

RECKLESSNESS

Los Angeles police have decided not to try and turn back the clock of this age and make it run more slowly. Men and women who drive automobiles fast are not to be molested, if they obey the rules, are not reckless, are courteous. Failing to obey traffic regulations, to make safety stops, and indulging in any kind of careless, reckless driving will be relentlessly punished, but on long stretches of unintersected streets and roads drivers can drive fast. That's recognition of the age in which we live. It's a rapid age. Everything moves. But speed need not cancel courtesy. Speed need not be recklessness.

AIR COURSES

Speaking of education the University of Michigan, since it began to offer courses in aeronautical engineering a few years ago, has had 97 graduates in that department. A Chinaman, finishing at this school a few years ago, is now buying airplanes and equipment from the United States at the rate of $6,000,000 a year.

The Diary

of a

New Yorker

By CLARK KINNAIRD

NEW YORK.—Out of the maze of autumn openings, "Faust," produced by the Theatre Guild, has attracted the most attention, but not the most favorable reviews. Indeed, the critics have found it dull, and are puzzled. Goethe's masterpiece, as translated from the German and fit to male stars of the past, has been popular fare. Now, here it is, unabridged as it were, in a prologue and nineteen scenes, an English version by Graham and Tristan Rawson, and directed by Frederick Holl, the director of the Berlin Volksbuehne (People's theatre). Here it is, in all its supposed glory—and the critics find no glory.

Gilbert W. Gabriel, highbrow critic, tries to explain in these words: "Most of all, maybe, you'll wonder, why try a 'Faust' at all in English. The sumptuous clang of Goethe's phrases, the surge and majesty of his great sentences, the exultant and warm color of his words of heavenly wrath and fiendish irony—how could English recapture these passionate resonances which are half the gorgeousness of 'Faust' in the original?"

"Perhaps it is just the pinched speaking that this British translation seems to call for that turns each famous passage into a cool, thin trickle. Or perhaps the cast, finding itself in semi-modern costume (period of 1820, by Lee Simonson), had decided to live up to the Kate Greenaway atmosphere and be nicely chirrupy and tea-cuppy about its conversation. At any rate, we had all the sing-song and none of the sonority; much phoniness and few of the phonetics."

Those who remember Sir Henry Irving and his production may weep. The old always looks better.

George Gaul plays Faust, Dudley Digges is Mephistopheles and Walter Vonnegut is Wagner.

Grace George, whom the road knows so well, is to return to the Broadway stage soon in an English play. Her husband, William A. Brady, will be the producer. She was last seen in the provinces in "The Road to Rome."

New York may have "the world's greatest exposition." It would be in 1932 in celebration of the 200th anniversary of the birth of George Washington. Minimum cost would be $100,000,000. Mayor Walker and Governor Smith must approve. Since Philadelphia had an expo fizzle several years ago, city administrations haven't been eager to "join up." Chicago, I believe, plans one for 1933. About it, it held what probably was the most successful one—in 1893.

Since exposures have been made of exploitation of the jobless by some private employment agencies, some of the organized workers are demanding that labor unions operate job agencies.

Bobbed hair in New York now is so long that curls show beneath the hat. You're quite out of it if the hair doesn't show.

Well, the night clubs are living up to their movie reputation again. A girl died from a beating in one. Attempting to protest against the treatment of another guest, the young woman, in spite of the fact her rich escort tried to defend her, was struck by an attache, it is alleged.

Kellygrams

By FRED C. KELLY

A business chief once said to me, as he closed down his desk to go to a ball game at 3 o'clock. "Tomorrow I may have to be here until 7 o'clock. But today, when I don't, I'm going to grab off a stay here just to try to make a record for the number of hours put in at the office. Business is not a mere endurance test."

TUNING IN

The doctor's little daughter had strayed into his surgery, and was watching, wide-eyed, as he tested the heart and lungs of a patient. Suddenly she spoke.

"Getting any new stations, daddy?"

WISE MAN

Then there was the little umpire who was terrorized by the large colored gentleman at bat. "Strike one!" said the umpire, timorously. The huge colored gent raised his bat, but finally compromised with a glare that meant he was giving his prospective victim one more chance. Another ball came whizzing "through the middle." "Two!" yelled the umpire. "Two what?" roared the dusky giant, gathering himself for the assault. "Too high," said the umpire. King Solomon himself never made a wiser decision.

AN EMBARRASSING MOMENT

Dinner, unfortunately, was a little late, and a guest asked the hostess whether she would be kind enough to play something. Seating herself at the baby grand, she executed an admirable excerpt from Wagner. She finished but there was still a few more minutes to wait, and in the rather pained silence she turned to a deaf old gentleman on her right and asked: "Would you like a sonata before dinner?" Her guest gave a start of surprise and pleasure. "Thank you," he replied. "I had a couple on the way here, but I think I could manage another."

SPEAKING OF THE SCARCITY OF BIG GAME

Behind the Scenes in Washington

By CHARLES P. STEWART

Corollary: A consequence; obvious deduction.—Funk & Wagnalls Dictionary.

WASHINGTON.—We may as well get acquainted with the "corollaries" now as later—the Monroe Doctrine "Corollaries."

The senate is sure to be battling them around most of next winter.

As soon as the solons take up the Kellogg peace treaty—the one in which America and some 20 or 30 other countries propose to "renounce war as a national policy"—as soon as the senate takes up—to ratify it, or chuck it in the waste basket—then we shall begin to hear about the "corollaries"—oh! a whole lot about them.

The Kellogg treaty is not actually in effect, understand.

The different countries' respective foreign ministers, like Secretary Kellogg, have signed it; it still remains for their various congresses, parliaments, assemblies, diets, tags, skupt-chinas, sobranjes, or what-not—such as our senate—to ratify it, to make it binding—if so hazy an agreement can be considered binding at all.

These assorted legislative bodies show no enthusiasm about going ahead with the job until the senate has acted favorably on it.

And no wonder! maybe—considering how the senators fooled them on the Versailles treaty and the League of Nations—letting the rest of the world ratify both propositions for all they were worth, and then giving them both the air, here in Washington.

But the "corollaries." Well, the Kellogg treaty is regarded in senatorial circles at least harmless to the United States—except possibly in one detail. Quite a few senators are afraid it hints that we must not fight even for the Monroe Doctrine.

Secretary Kellogg says it hints at no such thing—that it distinctly permits "defensive warfare"—and that a fight for the Monroe Doctrine, on this country's part, would be "defensive warfare" any day.

Nevertheless, some senators are not satisfied.

The suspicion is that these senators, before voting for the treaty, will insist on a clause putting teeth into the Monroe Doctrine—and its "corollaries."

The European governments would stand for it.

They have swallowed so much of that doctrine—and its "corollaries"—that they are not likely to gag at anything at this late date.

The Latin American republics are different.

The doctrine itself, to be sure, is all right by them. Substantially, it simply makes the United States the new world's general protector against old world aggression—just, even though unsolicited, is friendly.

But—the "corollaries." There are several of them—the Grant "corollary," the Olney "corollary," the "corollaries" of Root and Hughes.

Assembled, they signify—"America will not permit an old world power to do anything which might seem, in reason, to justify an old world power in resorting to bull-doing tactics."

Also—"America claims the right to do as she thinks best in the new world—to maintain protectorates in Cuba and Panama, to impose prohibition on Porto Rico and the Virgin Isles, to intervene in Haiti and Nicaragua, and the like."

How to Achieve Beauty

By MME. HELENA RUBINSTEIN

The Well-Equipped Hand Bag

It may seem an unusual thing to take up the subject of your first aid to beauty in an article dedicated to good grooming. Nevertheless, the woman who prizes the reputation of being well-groomed at any hour of the day, knows that she must rely to a great extent upon a well-equipped hand bag. Please do not mistake me here. I don't mean that a well-groomed woman relies upon constant re-application of makeup. She doesn't. She makes up in the morning to stay made up. However, we all of us know that there are emergencies when it is of the utmost importance to have a good vanity close at hand.

While I am talking about the use of makeup and the well-equipped hand bag, let me urge you not to make the fatal mistake of performing your toilette in public. No woman who cherishes the regard of her associates will commit any of the personal faux pas which are included in the public exhibition of her combing, powdering and generally making up. Should you be called upon to look your very best at short notice, you will almost always find yourself near to a hotel or shop rest room, or some other private place where it is perfectly permissible to call upon your traveling beauty aids.

Hand bags these days are usually made large enough to hold a full supply of the preparations which will satisfy any urgent need. The first of them, of course, will be a powder puff. It need not be very large. For your purse, a thin puff averaging about two inches in diameter is quite satisfactory. Be sure that it is immaculately clean. I cannot understand how a woman can expect to have a clean face when she continually powders it with a dirty powder puff.

Down powder puffs, while very pretty as boudoir accessories, are not practical for quick makeup. Lambs wool or velvet is your best choice. A powder puff which has a little case of its own is an excellent investment, since it not only prevents the powder from spoiling the inside lining of your bag, but it keeps the puff cleaner, and away from discolorations which are inevitable if it is constantly rubbing up against money, metal vanities, etc.

A sifter vanity is, as a rule, the most satisfactory way of carrying your powder. However, for the sake of compactness,

Household Hints

By MRS. MARY MORTON

MENU HINT

Pot Roast Riced Potatoes
Head Lettuce, Roquefort Dressing
Beets
Fruit Gelatine Coffee

There are several kinds of pot roasts. My favorite is one similar to that in this menu, only I do not always use tomato. I season with a couple of bay leaves, a few whole cloves stuck into the meat, a small onion, also browned in the suet, salt and pepper.

Today's Recipes

Pot Roast—Take four pounds beef from round or rump in one solid piece. Melt a little suet or fat in a skillet, put in meat and brown well on both sides. Remove meat to kettle or iron pot and cover with boiling water. Add fat from skillet, one small can tomato, two bay leaves, three or four whole cloves, one turnip cut fine, two carrots, two onions cut fine, juice of one-half lemon, two tablespoons vinegar, two pieces celery cut fine, salt and pepper to taste. Cook slowly. Do not add more water unless absolutely necessary, as the gravy must be cooked down well. Remove the meat when done and thicken the gravy with one tablespoon cornstarch mixed to a paste with water.

Fruit Gelatine—Bananas, oranges and skinned, halved and seeded grapes added to strawberry gelatine make a nice creation. Serve with whipped cream.

Dried Beef With Eggs
(Mrs. Mary Morton's Daily Tested Recipe.)

Pick thinly sliced dried beef in small pieces, cover with hot water, let simmer five minutes, then pour off the water and put one heaping teaspoon butter into chafing dish with the dried beef. Let it cook a very few minutes, then pour into the dish four partly beaten eggs, stir like scrambled eggs. When done serve on toasted bread.

EARLY DE MILLE

Guide—"It is the oldest castle hereabouts."

Hollywood Tourist—"Yeh! What picture was it built for?"—Passing Show (London).

many women select the double compact containing both rouge and powder.

For a quick makeup I advocate the use of powder rouge. There is less trouble in applying it and the results are more likely to be satisfactory when you are making up under unfamiliar lights. However, there is one point to be made in favor of the cream rouge for your hand bag ensemble, and that is, that it is equally suitable for cheek rouge or lipstick. The tiny rouge en creme compacts will take up but little space.

If you are meticulous about your grooming, you will probably find a corner of your bag to tuck away a small nail file and a tiny eyebrow brush. I am almost afraid to mention the file, for I have been so frequently disgusted to see otherwise well-mannered men and women using a nail file in public.

By all means, prepare yourself against emergencies by maintaining a well-equipped hand bag, but when it comes to the use of those outside beauty aids, use discretion and common sense.

Diet and Health

By LULU HUNT PETERS M. D.

Author of "Diet and Health" and "Diet For Children"

Anteaters

Mrs. S.'s little boy found that a cookie that he had been given at a friend's house was full of red ants and he had eaten some of them. She immediately gave him a physic and he has shown no signs of illness, and she does right, and we red ants live inside a person?

There are several catchy cross-word puzzle ant-eating animals—the aardvark, tamanoir and echidna, and they thrive on their diet. While their digestive apparatus may differ from that of the human, you needn't worry about the few ant-eating little boys accidentally swallowed, Mrs. S., No, they wouldn't live. Their breathing apparatus is not adapted to living in liquid.

Yes, it was alright to give him the physic. Physic is alright to give when it is necessary to rush the contents through the intestinal tract. (They shouldn't be given in any abdominal symptoms, however, for in case there should be appendicitis, and some other conditions, they may do great harm. They should not be given when any sharp-pointed object is swallowed, either, and as I told you many times, they should not be given for ordinary constipation.)

Diet in Bright's Disease

The diet in Bright's disease, or kidney disease, is one without any condiments or stimulants of any kind, very low in salt, as low in protein (the meat element in food—especially meat, fish and eggs) as is consistent with good health. She probably has her good points. Your mother may not have just the one for her adored daughter, but you would not have been very happy if she had made him and you feel her dislike. And Mary's boy friend may not have the earmarks of a Beau Brummel or be a millionaire in the making, but he may be a good chap for all that, and to Mary he may be the One Man. And the affair may not be serious, anyway, so why make it so by your interference and expressed dislikes? A girl writes:

"Dear Mrs. Lee: I am very much in need of your advice. I have been going with a young man for over a year. We are planning on getting married. I love him, and he shows that he loves me, but his mother does not like me and my mother-in-law does not like him, and they made us break up. Do you think we should wait, as he is not 21 yet, but will be soon?"

"VERY LONESOME." Yes, I'd wait until he is at least 21, if you can. And then I would move as far away from the two mothers as possible.

Anxious: I see no harm in your going with the girl two years older than yourself, even if you are a preacher's son. But, of course, you wouldn't cut out your friend, would you?

Jacqueline: There is no harm in your giving your boy friend a photograph of yourself if he asks for it, and taking his if your mother does not object. Yes, there is such a thing as "love" at 14 or so, but it seldom lasts. It is usually called "puppy love." Petting may not mean love at all just a habit, as practiced these days. It may include kisses as well as hugs. I hope these answers will satisfy you Jacqueline.

THE QUARREL AT THE CROSS ROADS

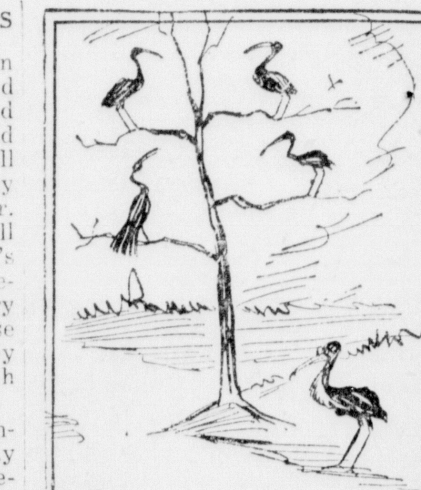

"I'm going to cast my lot in with White-Coat," replied Red-Feathers. "He is the largest and I am the smallest of us four and besides, red and white go well together and neither takes away from the beauty of the other. People might not notice me at all if they saw Golden-Collar's straws, and as for you, Purple and Green, you would be angry every time we met folks because it would be me at whom they would look. My coat is so much lovelier than yours."

"The very ideal! You conceived bird, how dare you say such a thing!" screamed Purple and Green, angrily, flapping his wings and trying to peck his saucy brother with his sharp beak.

"White-Coat took Red-Feathers' part and Golden-Collar went to the aid of Purple and Green and soon the four brothers were at it again, fighting just as hard as they had done at home."

"I am the oldest brother," screamed White-Coat. "If Red-Feathers wishes to come with me he can, and he is the only one of you three who is showing any sense. I know what I am about and he realizes how wise I am. Go your own ways and see how you come out. As for me, I am glad neither of you are flying in our direction."

"Mind your own business, you hateful fellow," screamed Purple and Green. "If Red-Feathers has spoken to you like he did to me, you would have plucked out his feathers, and now you will not let me get a peck at him."

"SOON THE FOUR BROTHERS WERE QUARRELING AGAIN"

"I am tired of quarrelling, anyhow. What is the use of wasting my mind on fighting when I might be flying and seeing the sights. If we never meet again, remember that Purple and Green is able to take care of himself, and that he will do nothing of which his family would be ashamed. Farewell, brothers! Waving his wing, Purple and Green flew off over the path to the right."

"You will be proud of me, too," cried Golden-Collar. "I intend to make a name for myself in this world. There is no time like the present to find out what awaits me in the lands that the left path shall lead me to." Away Golden-Collar went in the opposite direction.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

THE JUST MAN—The way of the just is uprightness; thou, most upright, dost weigh the path of the just.—Isa. 26:7.

ATLANTIC AIR LINERS

It is a far cry from the days when Santos-Dumont experimented with his puny balloons and told sympathetic but skeptical listeners that people would some day fly across the oceans with no more thought of the novelty of the experience than they gave to an afternoon drive in a phaeton.

The Graf Zeppelin has crossed the Atlantic and there is every reason to feel that Santos-Dumont's prophecy is within easy hailing distance of fulfillment and the long-cherished dream of trans-Atlantic passenger travel by air is at last translating itself into solid reality.

It is likewise interesting at this moment to recall the record of our own queen of the air, the Los Angeles. She crossed the Atlantic from Germany in October, 1924, or just four years prior to the flight of the Graf Zeppelin. Since then she has flown nearly 65,000 miles, including the flight from Germany and the one to Texas, from which she has just returned. Barring one or two rather distressing experiences, she has ridden the air with all the confidence and strength of an eagle and today is as shipshape as when she left the factory at Friedrichshafen.

Nothing that man has accomplished in his long history is more thrilling than his conquest of the air during the first three decades of the 20th century. But as man's accomplishments grow utilitarian they all gradually lose their thrill and finally suffer the fate that goes hand in hand with familiarity. In the future the arrival of an airship load of passengers from Germany, may, perhaps, mean nothing in our lives. But just at present it means very much indeed—so much that the Graf Zeppelin received a welcome that may make other ocean fliers suffer a few pangs of pardonable jealousy.

NEWSPAPERS SWINGING OVER

One very sure indication of the number of Democratic and independent voters who are swinging their support to Hoover and Curtis this year is to be found in the support of the Republican candidates by 86 newspapers having editorial policies either pronouncedly Democratic or independent.

There would be scant significance in a pro-Hoover declaration by an isolated Democratic newspaper here and there. But when 36 editors in Kentucky alone decide to give their full editorial support to the Republican nominee, despite the fact that their sympathies are usually with the Democratic party or are reserved for the candidate whom they think best fitted for the office, their action points to a trend of sentiment.

Such a consistently Democratic state as Alabama has 16 newspapers which have refused to support the candidate of the party whose doctrine they espouse, and are out and out for Hoover and Curtis. In Oklahoma the Democratic national ticket has lost the support of eight such papers, and so it goes, until the total list includes newspapers located in 15 states.

The Way of the World

HUMAN INTEREST

Somebody asks: what is a human interest story? Well, here is a human interest story. The parents of Lon Chaney, one of the most amazing motion picture actors in the world, were deaf and dumb. When Chaney was a boy his mother became an invalid, her expressive hands forever motionless with rheumatism. The boy Chaney, only in the fourth grade, cared patiently, constantly, for his mother. She lay quietly day by day, her voice mute, her hands silent. Lon Chaney HAD to make his mother understand and he HAD to understand her. He learned the art of pantomime. He acquired the most extraordinary resourcefulness of expression. He became one of the world's greatest actors. It is an example of the reward of devotion—a reward he did not seek but which was inevitable.

SUBLIME

In the devotion of human beings to each other, to principle, to home, to flat—in all expressions of sincere loyalty there is something sublime. Man is not at his greatest in science or literature or art. He is not at his greatest in discovery and exploration. He is at his greatest in those few human relationships in which there is sublime self-forgetfulness.

FAITH

Near the top of a box which stands on a table is a small opening. Men sit in front of this little window and look and listen. Suddenly the players on a distant stage appear on a screen over the opening and the sound of their voices is heard plainly in the room. They are enacting a drama and this little audience is hearing it and seeing it by means of radio television. Soon the instruments, looking like radio sets today, will be on the market.

Where shall the doubter hide? What corner can the scoffer find that is dark enough? Who laughs at miracles and shows his ignorance? Who has small faith and displays his littleness? Life is too great to think little.

RECKLESSNESS

Los Angeles police have decided not to try and turn back the clock of this age and make it run more slowly. Men and women who drive automobiles fast are not to be molested, if they obey the rules, are not reckless, are courteous. Failing to obey traffic regulations, to make safety stops, and indulging in any kind of careless, reckless driving will be relentlessly punished, but on long stretches of unintersected streets and roads drivers can drive fast. That's recognition of the age in which we live. It's a rapid age. Everything moves. But speed need not cancel courtesy. Speed need not be recklessness.

AIR COURSES

Speaking of education the University of Michigan, since it began to offer courses in aeronautical engineering a few years ago, has had 97 graduates in that department. A Chinaman, finishing at this school a few years ago, is now buying airplanes and equipment from the United States at the rate of $6,000,000 a year.

The Diary of a New Yorker

By CLARK KINNAIRD

NEW YORK.—Out of the haze of autumn openings, "Faust," produced by the Theatre Guild, has attracted the most attention, but not the most favorable reviews. Indeed, the critics have found it dull, and are puzzled. Goethe's masterpiece, as translated from the German and fit to male stars of the past, has been popular fare. Now, here it is, unabridged as it were, in a prologue and nineteen scenes, an English version by Graham and Tristan Rawson, and directed by Frederick Holl, the director of the Berlin Volksbuehne (People's theatre). Here it is, in all its supposed glory—and the critics find no glory.

Gilbert W. Gabriel, highbrow critic, tries to explain in these words: "Most of all, maybe, you'll wonder, why try 'Faust' at all in English. The sumptuous clang of Goethe's phrases, the surge and majesty of his great sentences, the exultant and warm color of his words of heavenly wrath and fiendish irony—how could English recapture these passionate resonances which are half the gorgeousness of 'Faust' in the original?"

"Perhaps it is just the pinched speaking that this British translation seems to call for that turns each famous passage into a cool, thin trickle. Or perhaps the cast, finding itself in semi-modern costume (period of 1820, by Lee Simonson), had decided to live up to the Kate Greenaway atmosphere and be nicely chirrupy and teacuppy about its conversation. At any rate, we had all the sing-song and none of the sonority; much phoniness and few of the phonetics."

Those who remember Sir Henry Irving and his production may weep. The old always looks better.

George Gaul plays Faust, Dudley Digges is Mephistopheles and Walter Vonnegut is Wagner.

Grace George, whom the road knows so well, is to return to the Broadway stage soon in an English play. Her husband, William A. Brady, will be the producer. She has last seen in the provinces in "The Road to Rome."

New York may have "the world's greatest exposition." It would be in 1932 in celebration of the 200th anniversary of the birth of George Washington. Minimum cost would be $100,000,000. Mayor Walker and Governor Smith must approve. Since Philadelphia had an expo fizzle several years ago, city administrations haven't been eager to "join up." Chicago, I believe, plans one for 1933 or thereabouts. It held what probably was the most successful one—in 1893.

Since exposures have been made of exploitation of the jobless by some private employment agencies, some of the organized workers are demanding that labor unions operate job agencies.

Bobbed hair in New York now is so long that curls show beneath the bang. You're quite out of it if the hair doesn't show.

Well, the night clubs are living up to their movie reputation again. A girl died from a beating in one. Attempting to protest against treatment of another guest, the young woman, in spite of the fact her rich escort tried to defend her, was struck by an attache, it is alleged.

Kellygrams

By FRED C. KELLY

A business chief once said to me, as he closed down his desk to go to a ball game at 3 o'clock. "Tomorrow I may have to be here until 7 o'clock. But today, when I don't, I'm going to grab off a little recreation. I'm not going to stay here just to try to make a record for the number of hours put in at the office. Business is not a mere endurance test."

TUNING IN

The doctor's little daughter had strayed into his surgery, and was watching, wide-eyed, as he tested the heart and lungs of a patient. Suddenly she spoke: "Getting any new stations, daddy?"

WISE MAN

Then there was the little umpire who was terrorized by the large colored gentleman at bat. "Strike one!" said the umpire, timorously. The huge colored gent raised his bat, but finally compromised with a glare that meant he was giving the prospect a victim one more chance. Another ball came whizzing "through the middle." "Two!" yelled the umpire. "Two what?" roared the dusky giant, gathering himself for the assault. "Too high," said the umpire. King Solomon himself never made a wiser decision.

AN EMBARRASSING MOMENT Dinner, unfortunately, was a little late, and a guest asked the hostess whether she would be kind enough to play something. Seating herself at the baby grand, she executed an admirable excerpt from Wagner. She finished but there was still a few minutes to wait, and in the rather deaf silence she turned to a dead old gentleman on her right and asked: "Would you like a sonata before dinner?" Her guest gave a start of surprise and pleasure. "Thank you," he replied. "I had a couple on the way here, but I think I could manage another."

SPEAKING OF THE SCARCITY OF BIG GAME

Behind the Scenes in Washington

By CHARLES P. STEWART

Corollary: A consequence: obvious deduction.—Funk & Wagnalls Dictionary.

WASHINGTON.—We may as well get acquainted with the "corollaries" now as later—the Monroe Doctrine "Corollaries."

The senate is sure to be battling them around most of next winter.

As soon as the senate take up the Kellogg peace treaty—the one in which America and some 29 or 30 other countries propose to "renounce war as a national policy"—as soon as the senate takes up to ratify it, or chuck it in the waste basket—then we shall begin to hear about the "corollaries"—oh! a whole lot about them.

The Kellogg treaty is not actually in effect, understand.

The different countries' respective foreign ministers, like Secretary Kellogg, have signed it. It still remains for their various congresses, parliaments, assemblies, diets, tags, skupt-chinas, sobranjes, or what-not—such as our senate—to ratify it, to make it binding—if so hazy an agreement can be considered binding at all.

These assorted legislative bodies show no enthusiasm about going ahead with the job until the senate has acted favorably on it.

And no wonder! maybe, considering how the senators fooled them on the Versailles treaty and the League of Nations—letting the rest of the world ratify both propositions for all they were worth, and then giving them both the air, here in Washington.

But the "corollaries!" Well, the Kellogg treaty is regarded in senatorial circles as at least harmless to the United States—except possibly in one detail. Quite a few senators are afraid it hints that we must not fight even for the Monroe Doctrine.

Secretary Kellogg says it hints at no such thing—that it distinctly permits "defensive warfare"—and that a fight for the Monroe Doctrine, on this country's part, would be "defensive warfare" any day.

Nevertheless, some senators are not satisfied.

The suspicion is that these senators, before voting for the treaty, will insist on a clause putting teeth into the Monroe Doctrine—and its "corollaries."

The European governments would stand for it.

They have swallowed so much of that doctrine—and its "corollaries"—that they are not likely to gag at anything at this late date.

The Latin American republics are different.

The doctrine itself, to be sure, is all right by them. Substantially, it simply makes the United States the new world's general protector against old world aggression—which, even though unsolicited, is friendly.

Pot Roast Riced Potatoes
Head Lettuce, Roquefort Dressing

Fruit Gelatine Coffee

There are several kinds of pot roasts. My favorite is one solid piece. Melt a little suet or fat in a skillet, put in meat and brown well on both sides. Remove meat to kettle or iron pot and cover with hot water. Add fat from skillet, one small can tomatoes, two bay leaves, three or four whole cloves, one turnip cut fine, two carrots, two onions cut fine, juice of one-half lemon, two tablespoons vinegar, and pepper to taste. Cook slowly. Do not add more water unless absolutely necessary, as the gravy must be cooked down well. Remove the meat when done and thicken the gravy with one tablespoon cornstarch mixed to a paste with water.

Today's Recipes

Pot Roast—Take four pounds beef from round or rump in one solid piece. Melt a little suet or fat in a skillet, put in meat and brown well on both sides. Remove meat to kettle or iron pot and cover with hot water. Add fat from skillet, one small can tomatoes, two bay leaves, three or four whole cloves, one turnip cut fine, two carrots, two onions cut fine, juice of one-half lemon, two tablespoons vinegar, and pepper to taste. Cook slowly. Do not add more water unless absolutely necessary, as the gravy must be cooked down well. Remove the meat when done and thicken the gravy with one tablespoon cornstarch mixed to a paste with water.

Fruit Gelatine—Bananas, oranges and skinned, halved, and seeded grapes added to strawberry gelatine make a nice combination. Serve with whipped cream.

Dried Beef With Eggs (Mrs. Mary Morton's Daily Tested Recipe.)

Pick thinly sliced dried beef in small pieces, cover with hot water, let simmer five minutes, then pour off the water and put one heaping teaspoon butter into chafing dish with the dried beef. Let it cook a very few minutes, then pour into the dish four partly beaten eggs, stir like scrambled eggs. When done serve on toasted bread.

many women select the double compact containing both rouge and powder.

For a quick makeup I advocate the use of powder rouge. There is less trouble in applying it and the results are more likely to be satisfactory when you are making up under unfamiliar lights.

However, there is one point to be made in favor of the cream rouge for your hand bag ensemble, and that is, that it is equally suitable for cheek rouge or lipstick.

The tiny rouge en creme compacts will take up but little space. If you are meticulous about your grooming, you will probably find a corner of your bag to tuck away a small nail file and a tiny eyebrow brush. I am almost afraid to mention the file, for I have been so frequently disgusted to see otherwise well-mannered men and women using a nail file in public.

Antacids

Mrs. S.'s little boy found that a cookie that he had been given at a friend's house was full of red ants and he had eaten some of them. She immediately gave him a physic and he has shown no signs of illness. Did she do right, and will red ants live inside a person?

There are several catchy cross-word puzzle ant-eating animals—the aardvark, tamanoir and echidna, and they thrive on their diet. While their digestive apparatus may differ from that of the human, you needn't worry about the few ants your little boy accidentally swallowed. Mrs. S., No, they wouldn't live. Their breathing apparatus is not adapted to living in liquid.

Yes, it was alright to give him the physic. Physic is alright to give when it is necessary to rush the contents through the intestinal tract. (They shouldn't be given in any abdominal symptoms, however, for in case there should be appendicitis, and some other conditions, they may do great harm. They should not be given when any sharp-pointed object is swallowed, either, and as I told you many times, they should not be given for ordinary constipation.)

Is It Safe to Use Perspiration Checks?

There are over two million sweat glands on the body. In some spots they are more concentrated, such as under the arms. Checking the perspiration from these places where it annoys will affect such a small proportion that no harm will result.

It is necessary, however, to wash the part very thoroughly with soap and water before applying perspiration remedies, so as to lessen the possibility of closing in any of the skin pores. If there should be any pus germs enclosed, a boil or abscess might result.

A good perspiration check and also deodorant for the armpits is a 25 per cent solution of aluminum chloride. A little of this is patterned on after first washing and drying the parts.

For excessive perspiration of the feet, a solution of one ounce of formalin to the quart of water, is effective. This is first used daily and then once or twice a week is often enough.

Permanent Waving Not Harmful If Correctly Given

E.—Your sister whose hair was ruined by a permanent wave must have fallen into the hands of an incompetent operator. The permanent wave, if given correctly, should not injure the hair. I have had a dozen or so of them since they came in—one in London (this was the best), one in Chicago, and several in New York and Los Angeles. Once in awhile, I have had it turn out fuzzy—not a good wave—but never at any time has my hair been injured and I know my experience has been duplicated by many thousands.

I understand that hair that has been bleached or dyed may be injured by a permanent wave. Had your sister been using any bleach or dye? If her hair is very bad she may have to wear a transformation for awhile. But tell her there is no reason to become hysterical over it, for her hair will certainly grow out again.

We have an article on the care of the hair and scalp which will help her.

Xenia Central Holds Withrow To Scoreless Tie

FUMBLE COSTS XENIA CHANCE TO BEAT TIGER

Blue And White Wins Moral Victory In Stopping Cincinnati Team First Time In Nine Starts; Play Heads-Up Football.

FOR the first time since the two schools opened athletic relations two years ago, Withrow High School failed to exercise its usual superiority over Xenia Central High School's football team, which held the proud Tigers to a 0 to 0 tie before an astonished crowd in the annual gridiron tussle at Hyde Park stadium, Cincinnati, Friday afternoon.

After a two-year reign, the Withrow spell was at last broken. It was a case of the football pitcher going to the well once too often and while Xenia did not succeed in entirely lowering the Tiger colors it at least lowered them to half mast.

Extending over a period of two years, Withrow had won nine straight games until held to a scoreless tie by Coach Wilson's fighting cavaliers Friday.

Although Withrow registered eleven first downs to five for Xenia, the Blue and White team should have won the contest, only a fumble marring its greatest scoring chance in the opening quarter.

In the first period, Xenia, on a series of line bucks and sweeping end runs, brought the ball to the Withrow twenty-yard line. A fifteen-yard penalty for fouling advanced the ball to the five-yard mark. With first down and a touchdown looming, Buell fumbled and Withrow recovered.

After being considerably outplayed in the first half, Withrow threatened to score several times in the final two periods but lacked the necessary punch.

The educated punting of Seury, Xenia halfback, got Xenia out of many ticklish situations. His long boots averaged forty-five yards and kept the ball deep in Withrow territory much of the time.

Battling bravely, checking the Tiger's spring time and again when it seemed that Withrow was sure to score, Xenia's gallant band of gridiron warriors gained a moral victory in what may be Excuse it, please! Xenia did not have been scored but that avenue was not even attempted. Every scoring weapon that Withrow had turned useless in its hands, largely because of the head-up football played throughout by the entire invading team.

It was a great day for Seury, Snyder, Smittle, Gibney, Bell and others. The tackling of the first four was deadly. McCallister, playing his first game at end, was hampered by his old ankle injury but showed up well.

The scoreless tie was the second for Xenia on successive weeks. Xenia has developed a defense that is repelling all threats to score by opponents, but the scoring punch has been lacking because of the frequency of fumbles at inopportune times.

Xenia will entertain Miamisburg High here Friday in the second Miami Valley League game of the season. Lineups and summary:

WILMINGTON BEATS YELLOW JACKETS 42-6

Bolen's Cripples Desert Crutches To Smite Cedarville.

Although crippled because of injuries to regulars, the Wilmington College "Green Tornado" swamped the Cedarville College football team by a score of 42 to 6 Friday afternoon on the Quaker gridiron.

With four regulars out of the lineup because of injuries, Coach Bolen sent his second team into the fray to start the first period and the subs immediately scored two touchdowns. The half ended with Cedarville trailing 21 to 0.

Cedarville's lone touchdown came in the fourth quarter. "Chuck" Welmer was the offensive star for Wilmington.

Cedarville presented a weak line and the home eleven gained ground almost at will.

LANG CHEVROLETS WILL MEET AVONDALE FUELS HERE SUNDAY

Owing to a late cancellation, the Matthew Flowers football team of Dayton will be unable to meet the Lang Chevrolet's Sunday as scheduled, so the local team will meet the Avondale Fuels of Dayton. This team was the 150-pound champion of the Gem City last season. The game will be played at the Cincinnati Ave. Park.

The Avondale Fuels have played three games this season and have yet to be defeated. In their first game of the season they played a scoreless tie with the Troy Miamis. They following Sunday they journeyed to Tipp City, where they beat the team of that place by a 6 to 0 score. Last week the Fuel outfit had little trouble in beating Lockland, a suburb of Cincinnati by an 18 to 0 score.

To date the Fuel eleven has not been scored upon and is coming here with intention of keeping that record clean so the locals will no doubt be in for one of the toughest games of the season. Min Fisher, who played baseball here with the local semi-pro team this season, is their mainstay. Min has scored all the points for his team this season. He is rated to be one of the best offensive players around the Miami Valley. The Lang outfit will have to stop this boy in order to win.

The Lang eleven has had two nice workouts this week and all are on edge for Sunday's conflict. A few mistakes that cropped out in last week's game with Washington have been ironed out and the auto boys are confident they will make it two wins in a row when they meet the Gem City outfit Sunday.

The contest will get under way at 2:30 o'clock with Paul Boxwell of Wilmington College in charge.

CO-OPERATIVE STOCK SHIPPING FAVORED HERE REPORT SHOWS

Cooperative livestock marketing is gradually becoming the farmer's most satisfactory method of shipping livestock from Greene County, as shown by the following figures reported from the Greene County Farm Bureau Office:

Twenty-six cars of livestock were handled cooperatively through the association this week, comprising 1510 head of hogs, weighing 314,000 pounds; 163 head of sheep and lambs weighing 12,775 pounds; twenty calves weighing a total of 3025 pounds and two carloads comprising eighty head of Texas range feeder cattle which were brought into Greene County for other buyers.

Sixteen cars of the livestock were shipped direct to eastern packers, while eight cars were sent to the terminal market.

The Greene County association, of which A. A. Conklin is manager, is a branch of the National Producers' Association, an organization with co-operative sales units on thirteen of the more important livestock markets of the country.

FEAR INJURIES FATAL
ZANESVILLE, O., Oct. 20.—Physicians today held little hope for the recovery of John C. Frame, 39, chief engineer of the local plant of the American Rolling Mill Company here, who suffered a fractured skull and other bruises when he was thrown from a motorcycle.

OPPOSE LOW RATES
COLUMBUS, O., Oct. 20.—The Baltimore and Ohio Railroad and others have filed suit in federal court here in an effort to set aside a ruling of the interstate commerce commission under which livestock freight rates were reduced. The railroads contend that the ruling is enforced their revenues will be cut down $3,000,000 annually.

PLAN HAZING
Hazing is in prospect for the 103 incoming freshmen of the Division "B" of Antioch College. Plans for hazing the large freshman class have matured and the first exercise will be a rope-pull at Grinnell's Mill Saturday afternoon. A pajama parade will be held the following Friday.

LIBRARIANS ELECT
TOLEDO, O., Oct. 20.—The Ohio Library Association, at the closing session of its annual convention here, elected Julian S. Fowler of the Oberlin Library, president.

Motor Cars of the Future will be low, slender, graceful, like the NASH "400" today

NASH has achieved tomorrow's motor car vogue in the Nash "400," today.

Every line and contour of the new Salon Body style suggests the fleet, clean-cut profile of the thoroughbred. The "400" models are big, roomy cars, but without excess bulk, smart cars without exaggeration. They're low, slender, and graceful.

You only need to compare the appearance of the "400" to that of the other new cars of the year, to know definitely that you would rather have the Nash. You only need to drive the "400"—to steer it, park it—to know that here is exactly the kind of a car you've always wanted to own.

The Little Yellow House
By BEATRICE BURTON -- RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSN. © 1928

READ THIS FIRST:

Emmy Milburn, at seventeen, wanted to lift herself from the sordidness of the little street she lived in, to the heights where she felt she properly belonged. After a party given by her rich cousin, Marianna, she resolved to better herself some day. Meantime she took a business course, paid for by her Grandmother Pentland, and snubbed, as well as she could, Robb, Hollis, the boy down the street, who worked in a mill, and who represented the life she determined never to let herself sink into.

Marianna tells Emmy she is going to marry Jim Baldwin next day, and to keep it secret.

Emmy succeeds in getting a stenographic job—her first position—and is immensely pleased that she will receive twenty-two dollars a week. She figures it will only be a little time before she can get an apartment of her own and leave Flower Street forever.

Since Uncle Bill Parks died Mrs. Milburn has been stopping in to see Grandmother Pentland a while each evening. Emmy tells her mother "You should worry about her—she has plenty of money."

Emmy finally saves up enough money to rent an apartment of her own.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER XXIX

The twentieth day of March was the day that changed Emmy's whole life.

Just how completely it was to change it she did not guess that morning when she awoke to the drumming of rain on the roof and the splash and gurgle of it in the gutters.

"My last day in this place!" she thought, lying in bed with her hands clasped under her head. She was filled with impatience to be away from the shabby, comfortable little room with its white-painted furniture, its white floor with its one small square of rug beside the bed, its snapshots of her mother in the garden and of Dan in his football togs.

No one in the world knew that this was the day she had chosen for her going. She made up her mind to do it very suddenly and so quickly that no one could possibly stop her.

"Mother will try, of course," she said to herself as she bathed and dressed, "but I'm not going to listen to her. I'll just close my ears. I'm going through with this! It's now or never!"

Her plans were very simple. For a week she had been looking around for a furnished one-room apartment somewhere in a good neighborhood. "No use going from the frying pan into the fire!" she had reminded herself.

On Thursday she had found one in the "For Rent" columns of the moving paper. That night she had hurried out to see it on her way home from the office, breathless with worry that someone else might have taken it.

No one had, and it was just the sort of place she wanted—a comfortably furnished sitting room with a bed that let down from the wall, a dressing room no bigger than a packing case, and a kitchenette that was really just a little table and electric stove set in a cupboard. It overlooked Gordon Park and the rent was forty-five dollars a month.

The agent who showed it to her said that the couple who was living in it was giving it up on Saturday at noon.

"I'll take it," Emmy had told him, and then there she had found the bargain with a tendril of hair.

"All I have to do now is pack up my clothes this afternoon and 'git,'" she thought, while visions of herself entertaining Marianna and Lovey and hosts of other people danced through her head. She could see herself sitting at that little gategate table with candles and roses on it, serving coffee and sandwiches to gay crowds. The cost of coffee and candles and roses never entered into her dream to trouble her. She had twenty-two dollars a week, and she was nineteen. The future threw rosy pictures ahead of her like a magic lantern.

She could see no bad omen in the gloom and darkness of the stormy March day and went slinging down the stairs to a breakfast of buttered waffles in the cozy kitchen.

That morning at eleven o'clock Lucille Ingham—they were Lucille and Emmy to each other by this time—came running back from the cashier's cage in high excitement.

"You'd better fluff out your hair and put on all your war-paint,"

"Hello, Sweet Sing!" she greeted Emmy.

she said, in her quick, breezy way. "Wells Harbison's in the big office! I just saw him, and the good word is that he's going to be here for the next two or three months while Harvord's in Europe."

Lucille was very polite and respectful to the men from whom she took dictation—Harbison and Jones, the sales manager—but behind their backs she called them "Harvord" and "Jonesy."

She took her little make-up box from her top drawer now and vanished with it in the direction of the stairs and the girls' dressing room.

A half hour later Emmy saw a man in gray clothes come out of Harvord Harbison's office. She knew that he must be Wells Harbison even before Lucille let out a stealthy "Hi!" to attract her attention to him.

She understood, the minute she laid eyes upon him, why Lucille had said, "Just wait 'til you see him!" almost two months before.

He was well worth seeing. Tall and broad shouldered, with close-cropped blond hair that looked sunburned, as if he had been under a southern sun all winter. His skin was bronzed, too, so that his collar gleamed upon his neck like snow.

His coat gripped his neck and shoulders in a way that suggested the iron muscles under it, and he walked with an athlete's swagger.

The only thing they did not like was his eyes. He looked straight in the face as he came across the wide office, and they were as cold as gray as the ice that lay upon Lake Erie before her window. But when he shook hands with her they lighted up.

It came to her as she said, "How do you do?" that the glow of intensity in them was an offering to her beauty. They made her conscious of herself as she never had been before—of the smoothness and warmth of her skin as she flushed, and of the smallness of the hand that she put in his hand for a second. She knew, in some way, that he was noticing these things about her, too.

She found herself wishing, all at once, that he knew that her great-uncle had owned this building and that she wasn't just a girl who worked for him—that her mother's people were every bit as proud and prosperous as he looked. And yet she was glad that she was working for him in this office, too.

The telephone on her desk rang and she sat down to answer it. The agent for the apartment building overlooking Gordon Park was on the wire to tell her that her one-room suite would not be empty until the next day at noon. He was sorry.

"Oh, I'm sorry, too," said Emmy. When she hung up the receiver and looked around, Mr. Wells Harbison was gone. The office seemed empty and dull without him although he had not been in it more than three minutes.

"Didn't I tell you he was a won-

Lovey took another cigarette from her small blue-and-gold case while Grandmother Pentland watched her with strong disapproval written in every carved line of her old face.

"The best friend I had when I went to Miss Hinchcliff's school down in Virginia was a girl named Daisy Charteris," said Lovey, puffing away.

"You'll pardon me, but that smoke is making me ill, Lovey," Grandmother Pentland broke in sharply.

Lovey put out her cigarette by screwing it against the polished leg of the center table.

"I was going to say, Emmy," she said without a glance at Grandmother Pentland, "that Daisy Charteris married a man named Harbison."

"Was his name Wells Harbison?" asked Emmy, hoping that it was not. She had thought of practically nothing but Harbison's face and his voice and the way he had looked at her, all the way home from Bash's Grocery Store.

Lovey shook her little head with its waves of marcelled hair—"curly maple" hair, Grandmother Pentland called it in the bosom of the family.

"I think not," she said slowly. "I couldn't go to her wedding because I came down with measles just a week before—and I was to have been a bridesmaid, too. But we wrote to each other for a couple of years and it seems to me I used to address her letters 'Mrs. H. Harbison.' Let me think."

"What difference does it make?" Grandmother wanted to know. "Do you ever see Marianna—either of you? I hear she's back in town."

The girls shook their heads and said "No."

"Well, she's back—staying at the Baldwin's country place down at Brecksville," Grandmother had her own sources of information always. "If you do see her tell her I don't want to see her."

She did want to see her, of course. Her old face, with its high nose and its firm chin and imperious eyes, was full of misery as she sat drinking her weak tea and staring at the pink coils in the grate.

"There are lots of Harbisons in the world," Emmy was thinking; "I hope it isn't mine who's married to Daisy Charteris."

She never had thought of Harvord Harbison as "mine," although she had known from the beginning that he was a widower.

Lovey got up and went to the door of the kitchen where Perry was in secret conference with his mother.

"Come along, you," she called. "If we're ever going to get to that matinee, we'll have to shake a leg! Now, do you hear, Perry? Exasperation crept into her voice."

"Whatever were you two talking about so long?" she demanded suspiciously as they came into the dining room.

The book is a witty and penetrating account of his recent visit to the United States. Hollywood and Broadway are covered in Mr. Nichols' itinerary. Included in the volume is a chapter on the "American Comedy Show," which he carried on, nevertheless. Along the way, he met John Ralston, his wife, Jobyna Ralston, his wife, prepared to team with him in a dual sick act. Jobyna Ralston gave him a link of German, and he commenced to sneeze her head off. She's battling an attack of flu at this penning.

Gene Towns is what may be popularly termed a character. He's just a kid—twenty-four. He earns around $650 a week. He "gagged" Corinne's last flicker, "Outcast," and he's doing ditto for her forthcoming one, "Saturday's Children." He has written a play which Fannie Brice wants to produce. He has written another that Jed Harris wants to produce. He's going to collaborate with Forrest Halsey on one. Gene's chief distinction is disregard for his moustache. He rates the only man I have ever seen with a lip decoration who doesn't yank at it to be sure 'tis still in place.

MANUFACTURERS:
Hoover Saved Them Millions
The high standard of living in America is the result of the steadily increasing per capita productivity. These standards can be advanced only by the elimination of waste in industry. The less waste, the lower the price of a commodity; the lower the price the more people can afford to buy it. Hence the larger the market the greater the number of workers that can be employed. Working upon these principles, Herbert Hoover, while secretary of the department of Commerce, set about to save waste in industry and it is estimated that he saved $600,000,000 to American manufacturers in a single year. Numerous laws upon standardization of products had failed. "Do not coerce, encourage," said Mr.

Hoover, and calling the representatives of eighty-six industries together, he let them talk themselves into a solution of the problems that had cost them millions for many years.

Elimination of waste and standardization of products was but the beginning of Hoover's work. As head of the United States government it will be increased many fold.

CIVIC LEAGUE NOTES

A recent appeal for the observance of Civic Week in Dayton carries with it some sentences that are so appropriate to our city that it is quoted here, leaving you to put "Xenia" into the blank spaces. Then think it over and act upon the suggestions therein.

"Cities are no different from individuals. They need to think seriously from time to time about the position they hold in the state and nation; to look over and not overlook civic weaknesses and to make new and high resolves to add to their storehouse of municipal patriotism. It is not enough to pay taxes and to lead lives that are within the law. The greater obligations are to be creative in thought concerning; to learn more about; and to boost whenever occasion or opportunity affords. Why one city grows and another doesn't may be traced almost invariably to the thought of citizenship."

Many years ago, Eli Millen made almost exactly the same statement in comparing Xenia with Dayton. The years that have passed since Mr. Millen's death have not brought much change in our attitude toward our own town. Let us resolve to be more loyal Xenians, and boost—not knock!
